Candle Light Vigil in Support of Taiwan's Wild Strawberry Student Protesters

On Saturday, December 6, nearly 100 members of San Diego's Taiwanese American community showed up at TACC for the memorable candle light vigil. The evening event was organized jointly by SDTCA, NAPA-SD and NATWA-GSD in support of freedom-loving students. The students had been peacefully protesting the government's violation of citizens' freedom of speech and assembly in Taiwan during the visit of a low-ranking Chinese official to Taiwan in early December.

Formal TAFSD President professor Ching-Chih Chan served as the moderator for the vigil. After a brief video presentation portraying the student protest movement, several people shared their views of the protest and government's repressive responses. Among them were Chris and Sue Fan who just returned from Taipei and had personally witnessed the government's violation of protesters' freedom and police brutality toward peaceful protesters. In addition, UCSD Taiwanese student representatives explained why their generation had been known as the strawberry one. Being born in the affluent 1980's of Taiwan, they had been considered to be spoiled and not unlike strawberries are only pretty on the outside but soft inside. However, with their protest movement in Taiwan the young people have since proven that they care and will stand up for their rights and Taiwan's future. And, they have proudly called their protest the Wild Strawberry Movement.

The mood of the evening was solemn. There was much sadness about the regress of Taiwan's democratic development since Ma Ing-jeou's becoming the nation's president in May. The fact that even young people of the Strawberry generation have become politically active reflects not only the public's anxiety about Taiwan's becoming less democratic but also its fear of Taiwan's ultimately turning into a part of the Communist-ruled China.

Through the use of IT technology, we were able to have the entire proceeding broadcasted live globally. And, thanks to the arrangement of Chris and Sue Fan, San Diego TV News 6 sent a report team to cover the vigil and subsequently reported the event at 10 P.M.

Pediatric Health, Illnesses and Myths

Speaker: Jennie Ou, M.D
Date: 02/21/09 (Sat) 2:00 PM

Children are unique and complex beings. They bring love and joy to parents, but also present them with the challenge of how best to care for them. Parents are inundated with advice on this matter, but don't always know which advice to follow and which may be based on misconception and myth. Furthermore, children often become sick or hurt, and it may be difficult for parents to know when the situation may be serious and the child should be evaluated by a pediatrician, or when only watchful waiting is needed. This lecture will help to clarify some of these points and aid parents in caring for their children.

Dr. Ou graduated from Stanford University with a Bachelor of Science in Biology. She subsequently went on to medical school at the University of California, San Diego, followed by an internship and residency in Pediatrics with the University of California, Irvine. After completing her training, she moved back to San Diego to practice with the Sharp Rees-Stealy Medical Group, and has been working out of their Rancho Bernardo office for the last 4 and a half years. Dr. Ou is board-certified in Pediatrics and a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics. She loves working with kids and helping to keep them safe, healthy and happy!

Neil deGrasse Tyson is an astrophysicist and director of New York City's Hayden Planetarium. Donald Goldsmith is an astronomy writer in Berkeley, California, and the author of more than 20 books. This book describes in laymen's language the 14 billion years of cosmic evolution (based on our solar years). Book to be discussed: "I don't want to be born Chinese again"

Author: Joe Chung

Chung was born in mid-1960's Hong Kong and graduated with a B.A. from The Chinese University of Hong Kong. In 1991 he returned to the university to study Social Science. When Beijing regime jailed dissident Wei, Jingsheng in 1979, Chung realized the extreme brutality of the Chinese Communist party-state and began his in-depth research on and observation of China.

The book was initially published in Taipei in November 2007. It quickly became the "Number one Forbidden Book" in China. By October 2008, it had been reprinted over a dozen times.

There are 29 articles in the book. The first explains the book title. It was based on an opinion poll conducted by a major Chinese web site beginning on September 4, 2006. Only one question was asked: "If there is reincarnation, would you like to be Chinese again?" The survey was then the most sensitive one in the 50+ years of Chinese Communist rule. When the Chinese authorities ordered the poll to end on September, a total of 11,271 responses had been collected. Out of the total, 65.1% had indicated that they would not want to be reborn Chinese.

Book to be discussed: How Taiwan Became Chinese: Dutch, Spanish and Han Colonization in the Seventeenth Century

Author: Tonio Andrade

Andrade, currently Emory University professor, received his Ph.D. in history at Yale University.

The book examines the 17th-century transformation of Taiwan from a little-known backwater island, sparsely inhabited by aborigines and visited mainly by pirates and fishermen, to a productive colony that was home to more than 100,000 Han/Chinese colonists, who grew rice and sugar for export on world markets. Utilizing primarily Dutch, Spanish, Japanese and Chinese sources, Andrade argues that Europeans started the large-scale Chinese colonization of the island. While the Spanish established a base in northern Taiwan for not quite two decades after 1626, the Dutch colony in the south, which lasted from 1623 to 1662, was the more important one. The Dutch relied on Chinese colonists for "food, entrepreneurship, translation, labor and administrative help, while Chinese colonists relied upon the Dutch for protection from belligerent aborigines and other Chinese groups, such as pirates." This is a system that Andrade calls "co-colonization".
